

About Us

Headstrate entertainment is a Christian Music Publishing and Production company based in Hampton, Virginia. Joshua Head is an esteemed professional writer, producer, and musician. He is the CEO of HEADSTRATE ENTERTAINMENT. The young CEO is taking the music industry by storm and has several music and multimedia projects. Head has been producing music for television, film and record companies across the country.

HEADSTRATE ENTERTAINMENT is a strong company that Head started with a solid team of music professionals such as songwriters, music producers, music orchestrators and media specialists. Its list of star clients includes Stellar Award Nominated artists, film companies and major record labels. HEADSTRATE's executives also offer services for consulting non-profit organizations and churches on building their music ministries through innovative music ministry and youth outreach. Headstrate Entertainment has been featured through its various projects in several magazines and media outlets including Black Enterprise, Gospel Truth Magazine, Inspire Magazine and United Soul Magazine. Members of our expert staff have been featured in more than 20 conferences nationwide including the Gospel Music Workshop of America and the National Association of Negro Musicians. Headstrate's products and resources are featured in more than 40,000 churches, stores and retail outlets nationwide.

With a master's degree in music education from Hampton University, Joshua Head, president of Headstrate Entertainment, has toured more than 13 major cities as an accompanist, and performing with the Virginia Symphony. Head has also appeared on GOD-TV, an international television network. The world renowned Headstrate Band has been featured on several major platforms including a spot on the Tom Joyner Comedy show as a house band during the HBCU college tour. The band has also played for the infamous Hampton University vs. Howard University football game at Armstrong Stadium.

Head recently developed a new Children's Choir Curriculum for Urban Ministries Incorporated (UMI), one of the largest African-American owned and operated publishing companies. He arranged songs, produced the music, and wrote all of educational lessons to accompany the curriculum, which is being offered to more than 40,000 churches across the country. Headstrate Entertainment Inc. also produces music for Sunday school, music video and multimedia products for UMI.

The talented musician co-wrote a series of educational books as well as produced recordings for a five-year governmental project, which produced 4.5 million textbooks and other learning materials to be translated and published in six African countries.

Headstrate has partnered with a nationwide team of children's ministry experts, youth leaders and music teachers to develop www.myyouthchoir.com, a children's music website designed for music teachers, youth leaders and children who need music resources. These resources are specially developed for children of all ages and include sheet music, CDs, music articles and curricula. The website has already received rave reviews from churches in more than thirty states nationwide.

Head wants people to discover that his company Headstrate is truly more than entertainment.
